JUST TIME TO THINK.

There was not very much time to think. He could see the murals of their guns sticking out of the rocks. The little puffs of smoke that they emitted seemed as innocent as gray clouds in a summer sky. Once in a moment or so he could see the red head-band of an Apache, as he aimed that and the smoke, the rocks, and the sunlight were quite all he could see. And he was going at a full gallop straight at them, followed by a skillful handful of men—a handful that is called a platoon in the insignificant army of the strongest nation on the earth. In a few minutes, seconds perhaps, he would cease to exist, whatever that meant. He would be simply another young and efficient soldier on the papers of the regiments he died in action. The business-like United States has never set more store to man than he did, and that death is mere Indian warfare.

He tried to calculate the number of seconds of life left to him. Two hundred yards was about the distance and he was going at a good swinging gallop. But he could not remember the length of a charge's stride at the gallop to save him. It was exhilarating. He had recited on that very subject at the Academy only a few months before. So he tried to think of people. And first of all he wondered whether any people were of value to the world at all. He had had older friends say cynically that mere men were never missed by the world, no matter who they were. But it did seem wrong that he, young, strong, ambitious, and splendidly educated, should die thus in the very budding of his manhood without an achievement accomplished and without a friend satisfied.

Then his mind took a queer turn, and he began to think of perhaps, the very humbleness of his acquaintances. He began to think of McCarthy, of his own troop, who had been left behind at the post with half a dozen others. He had tried to teach McCarthy to read and write, even though his captain had laughed at him, and his commander had looked at him for adolescence. But he had always felt the necessity of doing something in the way of work, and so he had undertaken McCarthy, and he feared now that his efforts even McCarthy had laughed at him, thinking go it alone in this world. Then he thought of a girl back in the East, to whom he was engaged. His father had laughed at him when he had noticed the engagement, and told him that he would be engaged a dozen times at all probability before he was satisfied for life, and his mother had merely smiled in a knowing way, and remarked that she had heard "that she was a very nice young lady." But he and she knew how much they were to each other. He remembered, too, how many delicious day-dreams he had pictured for her when he was back at the Academy in the glory of his first-class year, and she was one of the ladies who come up in June to all but himself. And he remembered how she would smile and blush and agree with him in all his plans with the delightful confidence and trust of a young girl who is experiencing young love. He wondered whether she would remember him—always, as they had promised each other. He wondered if she would wear black for him and pray for him dead, just as she told him she prayed for him every night while living. He could see her in his white dress, slender and fair, standing in the doorway of the cloak-room, waiting for him to come and take her to the ball-room. He could almost count the roses she used to hold in her hand, and he even thought he could detect their perfume. And then he thought of his mother—and he almost wished to cry aloud to her as he used to when he was a child walking from a bad dream, and after her to take him in her arms. But instead he remembered that though barely of age he was a trained soldier. So he rose in his stirrups and waved his revolver over his head, and very bravely, "Come on, boys, wade in!" just as a hideous Apache squinted along a gun-barrel and pulled a trigger—and he thought no more for ever. —Harper's Weekly.

FOR THE RECORD IS THIS LIFE.—"If the blood is taken and imbibed it spreads disease as it circulates through the organs of the human body—Lungs, Heart, Stomach, Kidneys, Brain. It is fed with poisons matter it spreads disease on its course. In cases of Scrofula, Scabies, Eczema, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, Pimples, and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. Thousands of wonderful cures have been effected by it. Sold everywhere at 2s. 9d. Beware of worthless imitations and substitutes."

AMONG THE minor sufferers by the war in the East are the telegraph operators. The names of the Chinese Generals and ships are terrors.

INTIMATIONS IN THE BLOOD.—"We have seen hundreds of letters from people who have received great benefit from the use of Clarke's Blood Mixture. It cannot be too highly estimated, for it cures and cures from all impurities from whatever cause arising. For Scrofula, Scabies, Eczema, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, Pimples, and Sores of all kinds, its effects are marvellous. Thousands of wonderful cures have been effected by it. Sold everywhere at 2s. 9d. Beware of worthless imitations and substitutes."

THE SAMOANS will whip the Germans because they are much more courageous. One of their chiefs recently married his mother-in-law.

THE HEALTH and VISION of an individual depend upon the quantity and quality of the Blood. When the tissues have been at work, there are thrown into the blood, waste products, and if these are not eliminated but (through any cause) retained in the blood they influence nutrition and function and finally produce organic disease. This is the case of Clarke's Blood Mixture. In cases of Scrofula, Scabies, Eczema, Bad Legs, Skin and Blood Diseases, Pimples and Sores of all kinds, its effects of Clarke's Blood Mixture are very wonderful. Thousands of wonderful cures have been effected by it. Clarke's Blood Mixture is sold everywhere at 2s. 9d. Beware of worthless imitations and substitutes."

DO THOU LIKEWISE.

When one sits a candle in a window, on a dark night he never can tell how many lost and bewildered travellers it may guide, on their way. Once I knew a dear old lady who habitually did it on every dark night. The road that passed her house was always forsaken and lone some. She had a small candle in a sort of projecting window, where it would shun both ways and do the most good. She is dead and gone now, but let us hope that her candle is still there to pass the light of day.

This candle of Hodson's beamed hopefully in all directions, and among others, its rays fell on the eye of a woman who needed light at the darkest hour of her life.

How it came to pass she tells in a letter, from which we take the following:

"I was," she says, "always healthy up to May, 1894, when I had an attack of gastritis, which left me low and feeble. I had a bad taste in the mouth, and after eating, I ate I had great pain in the chest and sides, and the shoulder-blades, and I lay all night in the stomach. My legs trembled and shuddered over me, so I could not walk out. Indeed, it was as much as I could do to get across the floor. A dry, hacking cough set in and shook me very much, and I lost a deal of sleep.

"As I grew weaker I was confined to bed more and more, and my daughter was obliged to take care of me, doing the housework. A doctor was called in, and over a year. He tried fits one kind of treatment and then another, but none of them helped me. At the end of the year the doctor said he could do no more for me, and recommended me as a last resort to try a change of air.

"I had got so despair of ever getting better when a book was sent to me full of statements from different people, telling how they had been made well of various complaints by using Mother Seig's Cough Syrup, and I read of a young American girl, who, nearly having been cured in a漫游 (漫遊) of Europe, had got a bottle from Mother Palmer and our Chemists, Ramsay, and after I had taken it a week I felt relief and gained strength. All my pain left me, and I have never looked behind since. I take an occasional dose of the Syrup and keep in excellent health. I give you full trust in my Syrup, and I hope you will be able to get some for your daughter. Mrs. Ramsay, Ramsay & Sons, Finsbury, January 15, 1894.

What better use could we possibly put this letter to than to publish it? In this way it has fallen into the present reader's hands, and may turn out to be a candle in the window to show him refuge and shelter beside some long and gloomy path. A word more on this very point. It is not a matter of choice whether we help one another. We are obliged and bound to do so by every consideration of moral and utility. Human life is like the life of one man; if a single part is neglected, the rest must pay the penalty. Therefore set candles in windows. If, for instance, Mother Seig's Cough Syrup has done you good, say so, publish it, make it known. Others near you may be groping in darkness.

And it is all the more a subject of rejoicing that the remedy, as in the above case, conquers indigestion, dyspepsia, as that which complained it which clouds the sun for millions on life's hard road.

FOR THE RECORD IS THIS LIFE.—"If the blood is taken and imbibed it spreads disease as it circulates through the organs of the human body—Lungs, Heart, Stomach, Kidneys, Brain. Thousands of wonderful cures have been effected by it. Sold everywhere at 2s. 9d. Beware of worthless imitations and substitutes."

THE DUKE OF ORLEANS says he will risk his life to restore the monarchy in France. That's another proof of his madness. Why doesn't he risk something valuable? —Paris République.
